Safeguarding

Clickbait and Fake News is content whose main purpose is to attract attention and encourage visitors to click on a link to a particular web page, video, picture or other form of media. Often what you see isn't actually real or true but is designed to trick you, particularly youngsters into thinking its real or true.

You may see things suggesting something will happen if you share or don't share some online content, such as receiving good fortune if you share a post, that you may win a prize if you comment, tag someone and share it. Sometimes the suggested outcomes are nice things, sometimes they're not so nice. The real outcome however, is usually the same, it just won't happen!

Sharing content gives the originators publicity, access to the people you share it with and gives them coverage nationally and internationally.

It's important to encourage conversation about internet use. Talk regularly about the things that, as a family you are doing and looking at when online. There will be times when children see inappropriate content, but if they are happy to discuss this with adults then they will be happier and you can help to keep them safe.

Understand what apps are being used, how they're being used and what they do. Try them out yourself first before installing on devices children have access to. Set parental controls, either in apps, in device settings, through your Internet Service Provider or a combination of them all to get it right for you and your family.

Report and Block any sites or accounts that may find their way through your parental controls that are sharing content. Parental controls help, but are never 100% accurate as fraudsters attempt to work around them. It's important to monitor and encourage conversations about what's real and not real. Be Share-Aware! Before sharing content, ask yourself,

Is it genuine? Is it real or is it fake?
Is it from a reliable source?
Will it cause upset, hurt or harm if I share it?
Do I need to share it?
